Bantwana report for camp for FIFA U-17 Women's World Cup qualifiers

The South African U-17 National Women's Team (Bantwana) will report for camp on Friday, 8 April 2022 ahead of the FIFA U-17 Women's World Cup qualifiers against Ethiopia, with the first leg scheduled for 15 April 2022 in Johannesburg.

Bantwana automatically progressed to the third round of qualifiers after Kenya was suspended from football activities by FIFA last month. The South Africans will be looking to qualify for their third FIFA U-17 Women's World Cup [they qualified in 2010 and in 2018] which will be hosted in India after the previous one was postponed in 2020 due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

Bantwana Head Coach Simphiwe Dlodlu selected 36 players during her last camp in March and has now called up 24 players for the upcoming qualifier.

Dlodlu expressed her excitement at being able to get back onto the pitch with her team, but she is still disappointed that she was not able to play a competitive match in March.

"We love coming together and playing international football, and this week will be no different. We will continue building from our last training camp, and will be hoping that the players are still on the level we left them on," says Dlodlu.

"Although we managed to get a practice match against a local club in our last camp, I still feel it would have been better to play against another country. We will be hard at work in the coming week preparing for this qualifier match against Ethiopia, who we have been studying," concluded Dlodlu.
